THIS SUNDAY – 5:30 P.M. EVENSONG & PROCESSION FOR CANDLEMAS

Reception to follow in Green-Meldrim House. Nursery available.

SEPTUAGESIMA ...

This Sunday is called Septuagesima, which means 'seventieth', because it is approximately seventy days before Easter, which this year falls on April 8th. The name of this Sunday and the countdown to Easter it begins puts us on notice to begin our preparations for this chief festival of the Church's year. The countdown continues with the next two Sundays – Sexagesima ('sixtieth') and Quinquagesima ('fiftieth') – leading up naturally to the forty days of Lent (Quadragesima, 'fortieth'), beginning on February 22nd, Ash Wednesday. Now is the time to begin thinking about the corporate disciplines of that season, the Church's 'spring-training'.

The Three Purposes of Christian
Marriage – the Rector

THANKS

Thanks are due to the Elliott House Administrator, Mrs. William Osborne, who organized the Eleventh Annual Clergy Seminar, and to the volunteers who assisted her in hospitality. Most of all, thanks are due to Neil Robertson, Professor of Humanities at King's College, Halifax, who led the seminar through some difficult and important theological texts in which most of the participants (certainly myself) otherwise would have floundered. It was a superb investigation of questions of the will, both human and divine, as they developed in the late Middle Ages and in the Reformation's teaching on justification and predestination. If I may attempt a summary, doubtless inadequate, he showed how the drastic negations of Martin Luther are a solution to the problems of 'free will' that developed in the late medieval Church, and were not resolved by such moderate Christian humanist reformers as Erasmus. He then argued that Richard Hooker, the premier theologian of the 16th century "Elizabethan Settlement", provided a basis for retaining or recovering much of the pre-Reformation tradition within the reformed consensus Luther had shaped. What was negated in the Reformation is thus restored in the Anglican development of it – but on the basis of the negation presupposed. What was negated may be taken up again, but now with a new spiritual freedom.

This is important, as we now prepare for Lent, the Church's annual "spring-training", a season of good works – fasting, prayer, and almsgiving. We are free to take these up, precisely because we do not seek in them our justification or salvation – which is the free gift of God's grace, given on account of Christ alone, and received by means of faith alone apart from works. We take them up in the freedom given to us by justification, precisely that through them the powers of the soul may be sanctified in accord with what the Catechism calls our state of salvation. GGD
