The Third Sunday after Easter

May 15, 2011

CATECHESIS

To celebrate the Confirmation last Sunday, I read again one of my favourite short stories, Flannery O' Connor's "The enduring chill". It is a very funny story about the journey to self-knowledge of Asbury, a pompous, self-pitying, and angry young man with literary pretensions who has come home (as he thinks) to die. You have to read it yourself to enjoy its humour, but it is humour with a serious point.

At the center of the story is an interview with a Roman priest, whom Asbury has made his materialistic and bourgeoise mother call to his sickbed, in order to embarrass her. The one-eyed priest who arrives, however, has no interest in Asbury's pretentious chit-chat. With single-minded (one-eyed?) determination he proceeds to examine Asbury about the state of his soul – especially his practice of prayer and his knowledge of the Church's catechism, in both of which Asbury is woefully and willfully deficient. The interview ends in Asbury's complete rout: "How can the Holy Ghost fill your soul when it's full of trash?" the priest roared. "The Holy Ghost will not come until you see yourself as you are - a lazy ignorant conceited youth!". Nor does his mother escape unscathed: "the poor lad doesn't even know his catechism I should think you would have taught him to say his daily prayers. You have neglected your duty as his mother".

Asbury has fled from the middle-class materialism of his mother into barren intellectual pretention and self-loathing, but he has not addressed or acknowledged his own ignorance, laziness, and pride. The story celebrates the work of the Holy Ghost in bringing him to this knowledge, as the precondition of his conversion, and the beginning of spiritual life. But it also celebrates the Church's work of catechesis – the instruction of the mind in the truths of the Christian Faith, the training of the will in the disciplines of prayer. "If you don't apply yourself to the catechism how do you expect to know how to save your immortal soul?"

"Christianity is caught not taught": with such slogans was the teaching of the Catechism and of the disciplines of prayer retired in too many church decades ago, and the results are all around us. What was "caught" was only sometimes the Christian Faith, and more often the spiritual diseases of the World, the Flesh, and the Devil. What was "not taught" was the Christian Faith, and biblical and theological illiteracy that resulted are with us still, a doctrine deficit whose overcoming is one of the chief challenges of Christians today. We cannot leave unchallenged the notion that genuine spiritual life results from complacent ignorance, dilettante dabbling, and emotional vapouring. When the Lord gave his apostles the great commission to "make disciples of all nations" he told them to do so in two ways: "baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost”, and “teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you”. The sacramental means of grace are to go hand in hand with thorough and ongoing catechesis, the training of the mind and will. The Church itself, its families and fellowships, must re-discover itself as a community of teaching (catechesis) and of the sacraments. If we despise and neglect the means of grace, we should not expect to receive grace.

Now that these members have been confirmed, it will be important to maintain the momentum of their preparation for this rite, with continuing engagement after Confirmation in education and service, as well as worship. But right now we owe a debt of thanks to the teachers of our youth confirmation class this year, Mrs. Edward Derst, and Mr. and Mrs. Carter Hubbard. Theirs are critical labours in the ministry of Mother Church, as she raises up her children to new life in the Spirit of Christ. GGD
